

CASIMIR-PERIER PASSES AWAY; AGED 60 YEARS

Former President of France Who Resigned
at Time of Dreyfus Affair.

PARIS, March 12.—Jean Paul Pierre Casimir-Périer, former President of France, died this morning. He had been ill for several months, having been taken seriously sick last October. Former President Casimir-Périer was born in Paris, in 1847, and got a splendid education, becoming a licentiate in letters and law. In the Franco-Prussian war he was captain in the Mobiliars of Aube. He became a member of the Legion of Honor on account of his bravery. He became under secretary of State, in 1877, was in the ministry of war later, and was elected President of the Republic in 1894.

His resignation in January, 1895, was an international sensation. No satisfactory explanation was forthcoming, but it was said to have been due to certain developments in the Dreyfus case. One report was that the Kaiser had given the President his word of honor that Dreyfus was innocent so far as dealing with Germany was concerned.

Another was that certain documents in the case had been stopped on the way between Germany and the German embassy and photographed by the French government, and that Germany's threats resulted in Casimir-Périer's resignation.

KIDNAPED BOY STILL MISSING; NO NEW CLUES

DOVER, Del., March 12.—With two sets of officers working on two widely differing theories, the mystery surrounding the disappearance a week ago Monday of the four-year-old son of Dr. Horace N. Marvin has not cleared a particle.

Sensational letters, telegrams, and communications of various natures are pouring in on the half frantic father and the State authorities, many of them offering to return the missing boy for stipulated ransoms.

Most of these letters are undoubtedly written by cranks and sensation-seekers, but at least one is taken seriously. This is the communication forwarded to the State officials by Charles Tannenbaum, a member of the Shelton Detective Agency. In this letter the head of the detective agency admits having received from the kidnapers of the Marvin child a letter asking Tannenbaum to become an intermediary, and to bring reward demanded to the Canadian border, where the boy would be turned over to him unharmed. Tannenbaum at once communicated with State Detective Francis, of Delaware, and the lead is being followed today.

Meanwhile the force of Pinkertons engaged on the case and working from the Marvin house as a base are proceeding on an entirely different tack. Today a small army of volunteers, under their direction, is engaged in moving the "great haystack" near where the missing boy was last seen. In view of the lack of clues, Superintendent Damato, of the Pinkertons, insists that the child has not been kidnapped but has been drowned in the marshes or tumbled into some well or cistern.

Theodore Roosevelt World's Peacemaker

(Copyright, 1907, by Harris-Ewing.)

"THE PEACEMAKER."
French Artist's Painting of President Roosevelt.

Portrait of President to Adorn Palace at The Hague.

Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States and peacemaker of the world, has been immortalized on canvas by the facile brush of le Baron Robert de Doblhoff, a French portrait painter of renown, whose works adorn the walls of the Salon at Paris, and who is noted abroad for the splendid quality of his portrait painting. The Baron came to America several months ago to execute this commission which was given him by some "Peace Friends," as he expresses it, to paint a portrait of Theodore Roosevelt, the chief mover in the peace of the world, on hang on the walls of the Peace Temple, in The Hague, a palace to the goddess Peace, made possible through the munificent gift of Andrew Carnegie.

The portrait is life size, and the President has shown great interest in its progress, out of his busy life, giving the Baron four sittings. The rest of the studies were made from special photographs posed by the President for a photographer. It shows the President standing in an easy posture, with one hand deep in his trousers' pocket and the other resting lightly on his hip. The likeness is wonderful, and is regarded by those most interested as one of the best portraits of the President.

STOLEN $173,000 STAYING STOLEN

Nothing Doing in Search for Loot From Chicago Sub-treasury.

Reports from the subtreasury at Chicago to the Treasury officials here do not show any further deficit than the $173,000 already reported.

The account will be finished tomorrow or Thursday, and the four experts will return to their duties here.

Chief Wilkie denies the reports emanating from Chicago that a negro was flashing $1,000 notes in the Tenderloin there, or that the $173,000 was "temporarily loaned" to a shady bank in the Windy City by an obliging subtreasury official.

The chief admits he was a "space killer" in the days that are passed, but he says the imaginative stories that are published concerning the "discovery of clues" in the Chicago looting case are beyond him.

a benign, restful expression being on the face, instead of the usual restlessness. The artist has sought to portray the man of peace rather than action.

The picture is on private exhibition at the Fischer Gallery, on Fifteenth street northwest, but unfortunately is not open for the public. After the President and his friends have thoroughly examined it, it will be shipped to Europe to await the completion of the memorial to the calm-browed goddess Peace.

INSANITY WILL BE PLEA OF ROCKVILLE MURDERER

felt certain he had killed grandmother and had gone crazy."

The lad returned with Deputy Sheriff Galtner, to whom he had come to express his fears, and the scene that greeted them as they reached the head of the stairs was like a horrible vision of human shambles. Blood bespattered the walls and was sprinkled over the floor. It crimsoned the bed clothes and had dyed the gown that covered the body of the victim of the saturnalia.

Body Stretched Across Bed.

The remains of the aged woman were stretched across the bed, as she must have fallen out of sheer weakness from the loss of blood that had poured in streams from a score of ghastly wounds that her drink befrenzied executioner had inflicted with the cleaver. The crimson pools about the room told of the struggle she had made to evade the deadly blows and escape the grasp of the besotted maniac.

Blow after blow of the sharp steel was rained upon her defenseless body. She had raised her right hand to protect her head, and the third finger was nearly severed by the descending weapon. Cut after cut was made upon her face. Gashes were made in her arms. Her left cheek was laid open. Overcome by terror and weakness, she turned from her assailant, and as she did so he crushed in the left side of her skull with a terrible blow, which will upon the bed in the extreme of death.

Made Struggle to Escape.

The gruesome trail of blood down the steps of the stairway and into the parlor shows that the maniac must have gone there. That the ill-fated woman made a desperate struggle for her life is shown by the scratches and finger-nail marks which left livid abrasions on the back of McKay's head.

After the fierce but one-sided struggle that must have ensued and when ascertained that his victim was dead, McKay went down the stairway to the parlor found further vent for his demonic rage in tearing all the photographs out of the family album.

Saved Wife's Picture.

These he tore into bits, saving one which he placed in his inner coat pocket, and was found upon him when he was taken into custody. It was that of himself and wife taken thirty-five years ago, and it was published in The Times of yesterday. It seemed to have awakened his inner consciousness, for he carefully hid it away, retraced his steps, retraced and hid his wife's picture, and the remainder of the night near the body of his victim.

Oscar Awakened Him.

The endeavor of his son Oscar to get into the house had evidently awakened him from the stupor into which he again relapsed when the lad fled in fright from the barnyard hell.

State's Attorney Robert Peters states that the coroner's jury having charged McKay with murder, he will be held until the Montgomery county grand jury, which meets next Monday, indicts him for the crime.

The murdered woman, Mrs. Mary Long, had three children, John and Louis Long, and Mrs. McKay. Of the two sons John, who had been in the army for years, and he is supposed to be dead. Louis was reported to have been killed in the railroad yards at Baltimore some years ago, but the family is not certain as to that fact.

Mrs. Long leaves about $5,000 in cash and government bonds, and is said to have had some real estate.

The funeral services were held this morning from 10 to 11 a. m. at the Church at Forest Glen, and the body will be interred in St. Mary's Cemetery, in this city.

WOMEN'S LOYAL LEGION HONORS NEWTON FERRER

Members of the Legion of Loyal Women last night gave a reception in their hall, in Tenth street northwest, in honor of Commander Newton Ferrer, recently installed as department chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mrs. Emma Ferrer, president of the legion, was assisted by the reception committee in receiving the guests.

Miss Clara Barton was one of the number of women who welcomed the new department chief and spoke feelingly of the work of the soldiers during the war. Commander Ferrer and number of other prominent Grand Army men made speeches during the evening.

FINDS JEWELRY, BUT NOT OWNER

Inspector Boardman Takes Stolen Gems to New York.

Inspector Boardman, in charge of the Detective Bureau, left last night for Trenton and other cities in New Jersey, where he will endeavor to find the owners of the $4,000 worth of stolen jewelry recovered by him last week in a safe deposit box in the vault of a New York Trust Company.

Over a year ago the residence of William E. Boulter, a patent attorney, living at 1724 S street northwest, was robbed of $2,000 worth of jewels by two bogus telephone men. The thieves were apprehended in Elizabeth, N. J., after attempting a similar job, and about half of Mrs. Boulter's jewels recovered. Recently Major Sylvester obtained information that the remaining property was stored in a safe deposit box in New York. Inspector Boardman went to Trenton, where the thieves are serving a term in the State's penitentiary, obtained power of attorney, and secured access to the box. Much to his surprise, the vault contained about $4,000 worth of jewelry, all of which was shipped to Washington.

Of this amount $900 belonged to Mrs. Boulter. No clue to the owners of the remaining property was obtained until yesterday, when Detective Larkin, of Jersey City, came to Washington and identified several articles as belonging to a woman in that city. This woman will come to Washington the latter part of this week, when the property will probably be turned over to her.

DENVER CONSUMPTIVES ORDERED FROM CITY

DENVER, Col., March 12.—Great suffering, poorly dealt in some cases, will result if the order of the fire and police board that every house tent within the city limits shall be removed is carried out. This order will be enforced more rigidly in cases where the tent dweller is a consumptive than where he is in good health.

Real estate men are behind the order, and they have requested the city government to enforce the order.

There are thousands of house tents standing within the city limits.
